

tenants under stipulated conditions. Before Cyprus could belong to Greece it must be severed from the Ottoman Empire, and should England be sufficiently wayward to again present herself to the world as the spoiled child of fortune, and deliver over her new acquisition according to the well-remembered precedent of Corfu, the monetary value of all property in Cyprus would descend to zero, and the "Cypriote Fraternity," if householders or landowners, would raise the Greek standard over shattered fortunes.

The total of population within the entire district of Limasol in 1879 represented 23,530, comprising 12,159 males and 11,371 females, of all ages.

The following list is the official enumeration of animals and trees within the same province:—

ANIMALS.

Cattle.	Mules.	Horses.	Donkeys.	Pigs.	Goats.	Sheep.
6,006	1,812	1,129	4,026	2,138	19,896	11,790

TREES.

Caroubs.	Olives.	Walnuts.
267,779	114,413	957

Natural pine and Cyprus forests, with oak, &c., not counted.

VINEYARDS.

Cultivated land.	Uncultivated land.
40,642 donums.	114,650 donums.
	21,180 donums.

According to this official statistical representation the cultivated land would be in proportion to the population about five donums, or two and a half acres, per individual.

The question of ownership of lands will eventually perplex the government to a greater extent than many persons would imagine, and the difficulty attending the verification of titles will increase with every year's delay.
